Regarding Personal Tax Assessments; Color Pix Comment

Since the County Tax Assessor's office began advertising that personal tax assessments must be made by April 10 to avoid penalty we have been receiving some confusing questions from automobile owners.

In the first place, however, the assessor's office announced today that since the 10th falls on Saturday the deadline has been extended to Monday night, April 12.

One of the questions The Star cleared up by telephone to the assessor's office this morning was this: Does a car owner have to assess twice, when he gets his auto license and again on the statutory April 10th deadline? The answer is No—you assess but once.

If you have a current auto license, issued, we will say, last July, you were required to assess the car at that time—and you are not required to assess again on Monday.

But do make sure that the car is actually assessed; otherwise you could be penalized.

Our process color run of March 30 drew this letter from the University of Arkansas's Department of Journalism:

Editor The Star: Thanks for sending us your March 30 issue of Hope Star. You are publishing a fine newspaper. You are to be especially commended for the excellent color reproduction appearing on Page One.

Thursday and Friday of this week we are holding Journalism Days here on the University campus. We would be happy to have you join us. We have a number of outstanding students at the U. of A. from Hope and would be pleased to have many more just like them.

We couldn't make the trip at this time, but The Star will send a substantial delegation to the Summer convention of the Arkansas Press Association in June, to be held in Fayetteville this year—and maybe I can pay the School a visit then.

We will have missed some wire stories today because there has been incessant trouble with the Associated Press wire all morning. They were still working on the problem when I wrote this at 9:40 a.m.

Suspect Gives Police Wild Chase Here

A Negro man just released from Arkansas State Prison caused considerable excitement downtown about noon Friday and led officers on a wild chase before being apprehended.

The suspect was sought after police were notified he was trying to cash checks in downtown stores. A patrol car spotted him near the old bank building downtown. When they ordered him to stop he took off running.

Officers chased him down Second and north on Walnut where he was again ordered to halt. When he didn't Patrolman John Shirley fired a couple of shots in the air and the suspect just kept running. He was finally cornered near the Village Shopping Center and is being questioned.

New Trial for Texarkanian

TEXARKANA, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has ordered a new trial for Harold E. Harris of Texarkana in the slaying of Patsy Anne Hewitt almost three years ago.

Harris was sentenced to life in prison in the death and the appelate court reversed the conviction on grounds the trial judge failed to rule properly on the voluntariness of the written statement Harris gave authorities about the shooting.

Ex-Officials of Penn RR Face Charges

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —The Penn Central Transportation Co. charged Thursday two former top financial officers and a principal investment adviser organized and manipulated an unlawful conspiracy that caused America's biggest railroad to suffer heavy losses and forced it into reorganization.

In a complaint filed in U.S. District Court, the company listed as defendants:

David C. Bevan, Gladwyne, Pa., fired Penn Central vice president in charge of finance and former chairman of the finance committee of the board of directors;

William R. Gerstnecker, Philadelphia, former Penn Central treasurer and vice president.

E. Pakistan Claims Major Victories

New Delhi, India (AP)—East Pakistani independence forces claimed three victories Thursday, further isolating West Pakistani army troops holed up in major cities and rural fortresses in the secessionist province.

Associated Press correspondent Dennis Neeld, reporting from the rebel-held town of Kushtia, said the East Pakistanis appeared to control about half of the province.

Late reports said rebel forces blasted a rail bridge linking the army-held cities of Dacca, the capital, and Chittagong, the major port, destroyed an airfield near Comilla and captured an army depot holding nine tons of arms and ammunition.

Information received by Indian intelligence agencies corroborated many of the rebel claims.

When a Woman Weds She Changes From Jekyll to Mrs. Hyde

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — As every husband finds out, marriage sure does seem to change a woman.

When she gets a new name she seems to unveil a new personality—rather like sweet little Miss Jekyll being transformed into terrible-tempered Mrs. Hyde.

Many a husband, as a matter of fact, begins in time to think that the little girl he wed so hopefully has turned into 15 or 20 women, all different. To understand her, he feels sometimes like keeping a card index of her moods and whims.

In the old days she used to just toss on her coat and be ready to go anywhere with him on a moment's notice. Now he feels himself aging visibly while he waits interminably for her to decide which wig to tie on and what pair of eyelashes to glue over her own.

There was a time when she would order only a sandwich in a restaurant because she said she didn't want him to spend all his money on her. Today when he takes her out to dinner she calls for black caviar and steak—and goes on from there.

He remembers when he could almost span her waist with his fingers. Now, 750 boxes of chocolates later, it is all he can do to get his arms around the site where she lost the battle of her bulge.

"I certainly don't intend to marry you to reform you," she told him once. "I love you for faults as well as your virtues." But not a single day has passed in the last five years without her asking him why in Heaven's name he can't be more like the husband next door.

When he was courting her she told him she hated to gamble so much that even losing 50 cents at pennyante poker made her ill. Has she changed? Verily. She has changed so much that now the neighborhood bookie calls her by her first name and phones twice a day for her racetrack bets.

Before he led her to the altar he used to love the way she relaxed him by massaging the back of his neck. Not any more. It makes him nervous for her to get her hands that close to his throat.

During their engagement she enjoyed nothing better than walking hand in hand with him through the rain. Now she yelps for a cab if she has to go to the beauty shop, a block and a half away.

Now and then he wonders, a bit guiltily, whether he did something wrong to cause her to change so much. But it isn't his fault, and perhaps not hers for that matter.

The fact is that marriage is like wine. The more you take of either, the more it tends to bring out the truth.

WINNERS of the 1971 Friends of American Writers Annual Literary Awards include Edward Robb Ellis, left, and Don Oakley, right. Ellis, a native of Kewanee, Ill., with a long career as a newspaperman, received the $1,000 first prize for "A Nation in Torment," a personal history of the Depression. Oakley of Aurora, Ohio, and chief editorial writer for Newspaper Enterprise Association, received a Distinguished Recognition Award in juvenile fiction for his "Two Muskets for Washington," adventure tale of two boys, one a freed slave, learning to appreciate each other and the meaning of war during the American Revolution. The awards, presented for the 43rd year, are given by Friends of American Writers, an organization of Chicago women, in recognition of writers with Midwestern backgrounds.

Schemes of Scholars in Urban Solutions Make Mayor's Shiver

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

Many of the nation's scholars confronting America's urban problems are thinking the unthinkable.

Some of the solutions they talk about send shivers up the spines of mayors:

—Harvard's Edward Banfield says cities really aren't that bad, and are certainly much better off than they used to be. The problems, he says, are problems of the poor and there will always be poor people.

—Princeton's Michael Danielson says the nation shouldn't be in the business of trying to save "some cities which are just historical accidents."

—Wilbur Thompson, the pioneer urban economist is urging black mayors to tell their constituents that if they insist on new low income housing they'll just pull their cities down.

—George Sternlieb, Rutgers University urbanologist, is telling city administrators that America doesn't want cities and they ought to just give up.

Contradictory? Yes, but there are large areas of agreement.

Sternlieb and Thompson, diametrically opposed on whether cities as we know them will survive, agree on what American cities used to do. As Sternlieb puts it:

"The cities have always taken the poor migrants, first from overseas and now from the rural United States. The city provided an education, health facilities, lousy jobs but at least jobs. And the people who came were lifted up and moved out. The city gave them a capacity for upward mobility."

They also agree on what the result has been for most big central cities.

Sternlieb: "Now the city is a terminal place, it can't provide upward mobility. There was a time that city schools and hospitals were the best around. Now suburban schools and hospitals are much better. And the jobs aren't in the cities any more."

Sternlieb looks at Newark, N.J., a city he has studied more than any other man, and concludes it's a "squeezed-out orange peel.

"Newark is at one end of a pipeline which is just loaded with other cities," Sternlieb says. "A hell of a lot of other cities have no unique selling point to preserve them.

"If you can tell me what to do with Youngstown, Ohio, you're a good man, and who the hell needs Schenectady, N.Y., anyway?

"The fiscal crisis is just a symptom which tells us the city has lost its function and federal revenue sharing isn't going to bring the function back."

Thompson on the other hand doesn't believe the central cities have reached the end of their rope. "They're just in the awkward years, when the city is aging and before it's ready to be thrown away and rebuilt."

Thompson believes some cities will survive without help, continually renewing themselves. He's talking about re-

A Complete Pullout by 1973 Seen

ASHINGTON (AP) Two top Senate leaders, Republican Hugh Scott and Democrat Robert C. Byrd said Thursday they believe President Nixon plans to remove all U.S. troops from Indochina by the end of his term in January 1973—provided North Vietnam frees U.S. war prisoners.

Scott, the Senate GOP Leader, and Byrd, the Democratic whip, said in separate news conferences they drew this interpretation from Nixon's comments in briefing congressional leaders before Wednesday night's announcement of further U.S. troop withdrawals.

"He did not state a definite date," Byrd said, "but I had the very definite impression from what was said that the President has a date in mind," Asked if the date was before the end of Nixon's term, the West Virginia Democrat replied "I think that is substantially correct as I understood the President."

Hanoi Wants a Complete Withdrawal

PARIS (AP) — The Vietnamese Communists derided President Nixon's latest troop withdrawal program Thursday and cold-shouldered his call for serious negotiations.

"President Nixon has renewed his call for serious negotiations," U.S. Ambassador David K. E. Bruce told the 108th session of the Paris peace talks. "I await your positive and constructive response. An early peace in Vietnam and an early end to the killing there demands no less." The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong response was to reiterate its old demands for a complete withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Vietnam.

The Communists reacted quickly to Nixon's speech Wednesday night in which he claimed success for Vietnamization, announced a slight increase in monthly U.S. troop withdrawals and gave assurance that "American involvement in this war is coming to an end."

Variety Show Is a Week From Tonight

The time is drawing near for the performance of the 28th consecutive Annual Kiwanis Variety Show, Friday night, April 16th, is this year's show date, for one performance only. City Hall Auditorium is the place and the time is 8 p.m.

A group of hicks will congregate in front of the Happy Valley Store to entertain with their sparkling conversation interspersed with some fourteen specialty acts.

Mel "Nathan" Thrash is the genial store keeper and will be visiting with Guy "Lem" Grigg, Harry "Zeke" Hawthorne, A.J. "Shorty" Caldwell, Eddie "Hiram" Whitman, Horace "Snuffy" Fuller and others who may drift onto the stage.

Winfred Huckabee and the Combo of which he is a part will be entertaining prior to curtain time and during the intermission.

An hour or so of good clean fun is in store for those attending this year's Kiwanis Show, and all proceeds will be used locally for Kiwanis Youth Programs and the Golden Age Club.

K. Park, near Fair Park is a concrete example of Kiwanis Youth Work. The land for this park was purchased by the Kiwanis Club, deeded to the City of Hope and then improved largely with Kiwanis Club Funds. Kiwanians are looking forward to the time when our city will have a new Community or Youth Center and expect to participate financially in this project.

Calley Reaction Shows Public Insight Into the Processes of Evil

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Several noted theologians say the widescale reactions against the Calley verdict reflect a sharpening public insight into the collective processes of evil, and a painful recognition of general involvement in it.

"What people are saying is that the case doesn't get at the real devil in this thing," says the Rev. Richard A. McCormick of Chicago, president of the Catholic Theological Society of America.

"They're bringing out an underlying sense of national guilt."

The scholars say this indicates a heightened awareness of the social dimensions of moral failings, even if only subconsciously, but they state it also tends to obscure a basic religious corollary—the responsibility of each individual for his acts.

"This is the heart of human dignity and it was at stake in the Calley case," says Rabbi Dr. Abraham Heschel of New York's Jewish Theological Seminary of America, one of the country's leading Jewish thinkers.

He says the outcome was a "triumph for America" in upholding the concept of individual responsibility. "The moment you deny a person's responsibility for action and his freedom to act or disobey, you destroy the dignity of man."

But the military court, in convicting Lt. William L. Calley Jr. for killing 22 civilians at My Lai, provided a "great service to America" in maintaining that principle, even though the "primary blame" rests with those responsible for the war, Dr. Heschel says.

Other theologians, both Protestant and Catholic, agreed in interviews that the premise of personal accountability was basic to the religious view of man's individual significance, no matter how overwhelming be any system, its corrupting influences or military orders.

But they also said the extensive objections in the Calley case showed a growing realization, though often unarticulated, of corporate involvement in wrongdoing, and people's unwillingness to pretend to absolve themselves by blaming one person—as less sensitive

Terrorists Bomb Saigon Night Spot

SAIGON (AP) — Viet Cong terrorists bombed a crowded riverfront nightclub in downtown Saigon Thursday night, then from across the river turned automatic weapons fire on survivors stumbling through the club's demolished front wall.

A U.S. military spokesman said one American serviceman and a Vietnamese girl were killed and 12 Americans and four other Vietnamese were wounded.

The bombing of the popular CBC Club, which featured acid rock music by Vietnamese musicians, was one of two such terrorist incidents within 24 hours in South Vietnam. Military spokesman said a terrorist bomb exploded Wednesday night at a military hospital in the northern coastal city of Da Nang, killing one South Vietnamese soldier and wounding 20 others.

On Indochina's battle fronts, heavy fighting continued around South Vietnam's besieged Fire Base 6 in the Central Highlands where military spokesmen said 320 Communists were killed Wednesday. In Cambodia, Communists overran a government battalion in a battle Wednesday southwest of Phnom Penh. The UPI bureau manager in Phnom Penh, Catherine M. "Kate" Webb, was listed as missing in the battle.

Secret Meet of Soviet Delegates

MOSCOW (AP) — Delegates to the 24th congress of the Soviet Communist party met in a secret session Thursday to select the men who will guide his nation in the 1970s.

Only the 4,943 voting delegates to the Congress were allowed to assemble in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses for the election of the party's 360-member central committee, which in turn picks the 11-man ruling politburo. The 101 Communist and leftist delegations from 90 countries had to await the results outside.

Observers expected no change in the ruling troika of party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and President Nikolai V. Podgorny. But they foresaw a substanial turnover in the central committee.

The results of the voting are expected to be announced Friday just before the congress closes. Since March 30, the delegates have listened to speech after speech praising the party's successes over the past five years and outlining plans for the future.

The delegates, selected by party organizations all over this vast land, have broad powers—on paper. Besides electing the politburo and central committee, they have the right to formulate basic party doctrine and to decide "The most important questions of Communist construction."

The Street of Sorrow Only 1,000 Steps

By HAL McCLURE
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Way of the Cross, the path the condemned Jesus followed from Pontius Pilate's court to the rocky hill where he died, is only 1,000 steps.

Nearly 20 centuries later the traveler following those same steps may find the Via Dolorosa a Street of Sorrow still—for another reason. Only the most devout pilgrim can close his eyes to its commercialism and secularism.

Too often the visitor, remembering his early Bible training, has an idealized vision of Christ's last agony, perhaps a palm-shaded lane leading to a cloud-shrouded mountain.

It is far from that.

The Via Dolorosa is a narrow, twisting, cobbled alley leading from the Lion's Gate in Jerusalem's eastern wall through the teeming heart of the Holy City to the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, marking the traditional site of Calvary and the entombment.

It is lined with countless shops bearing such impious names as Eighth Station Souvenir Bazaar, Peace Land Souvenir Shop or Holy Land Exhibit.

Eager shopowners, who have looked forward to the Easter Week bonanza for a year, beckon from doorways importuning the pilgrim to buy souvenirs—olive wood crucifixes, mother of pearl Bibles, rosaries, brocades, maps, guidebooks.

The truth is, the old walled city of Jerusalem is not unlike any other Arab quarter of the Middle East—filled with the same sights, sounds and smells.

Nine of the 14 Stations of the Cross—which the Bible and Christian tradition say mark crucial events along Jesus' path—are on the Via Dolorosa. The rest are inside the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. Without a guide most of the stations are difficult to find as they are protected behind thick church walls dotting the Way of the Cross.

The names of some of these shrines must be Christianity's most colorful: the Prison of Christ Monastery, the Sanctuary of the Flagellation, the Church of Our Lady of the Spasm and the Church of the Holy Face.

Ironically, the first station, the praetorium where Jesus was condemned, is inside a Moslem boys' school and the pilgrim must wend his way through crowds of shouting boys. The third station, where Jesus fell under the weight of the cross for the first time, was once a Turkish bath. A tiny chapel run by Polish Catholics marks the spot. A combination museum and souvenir shop is at the rear.

Near the sixth station, where Veronica wiped the face of Jesus, two Greek Cypriot matrons, clad in austere black, sit on folding stools to catch their breath. They stare impassively at a wall covered with posters advertising Jerusalem's new film, including "Killer on a Horse" and "Hell Commandos." A lemonade seller, bells tinkling, offers them a cooling drink.

Close to the seventh station, where Jesus fell the second time, a modern-day moneychanger boasts he cashes traveler's checks.

Past the eighth station, where Jesus spoke to the daughters of Jerusalem, and the ninth, where He fell the third time, a standup narghileh—or water pipe—stall has a waiting line. The proprietor gives each smoker a fresh mouthpiece when he steps up for several puffs.

The crowds begin to thicken on the Christian Quarter Road just outside the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. Gino's Snack Bar, advertising spaghetti and pizza, is doing a brisk business.

Outside the church courtyard, the owner of the Express Laundry takes a noonday nap, his head on an ironing board. Beside the church entrance, an Israeli police sign warns visitors that inside they can't eat, smoke, play transistor radios or speak loudly. Babies and animals are forbidden.

The old Crusader Church of the Holy Sepulcher, badly damaged in an earthquake in 1927, is still under repair. Work is not expected to be finished for 5 or 10 years. The delay is blamed on church groups quarreling over how the restoration must be accomplished.

Saladin, the Arab conqueror of Jerusalem, taking note of the bitter fueding, turned the key to the church over to a Moslem guard centuries ago. A Moslem family still has the key.

A flight of steep stairs just inside the door leads to the rocky summit where tradition says Christ died on the cross in the company of two thieves.

A bearded monk gives a candle to one of the devout, an elderly woman in black. She lights it and places it on the altar, closing her eyes in prayer.

To her and others like her this is the only meaning of the Via Dolorosa—the Street of Sorrow.

Critics Not Pleased With Timetable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although cheered by members of the administration gallery, President Nixon's address on Vietnam appears to have won him little if any conciliation from leading war policy critics.

The chief executive's nationwide speech Wednesday night, said Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, "was disappointing in the extreme. We had been led to expect much more. We were obviously misled."

Nixon, despite an emotion-tinged appeal for "continued support," offered no surprises as he announced just a slight increase in the rate of troop withdrawals through Dec. 1.

Several congressional figures indicated they had expected, or at least hoped, Nixon would announce a definite date for an end to U.S. involvement.

And two, Senate Democratic whip Robert Byrd and Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott, said they believe the President has such a date in mind—but refuses to disclose it for fear of losing strategic clout with the enemy.

Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas, Republican national chairman, said the President "has put the monkey right back where it belongs—on the backs of those politically motivated Democrats who would rather be president than be right."

South Dakota's George McGovern, a Democrat who at least would rather be President than senator, retorted that Nixon "is still trying to convince us that a tragic blunder represents America's finest hour."

Another Democratic White House hopeful, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, said he remains convinced "the best prospect for an end to the war and the return of all our troops, including American prisoners of war is a fixed date to end our involvement."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said "the record speaks louder than his words. The grudging and slight increase in our troop withdrawal cannot conceal the failure of that operation.

"The people of Southeast Asia can no longer bear this war, and neither can the people of the United States."

House Republican Leader Gerald Ford of Michigan said the President's "continuing strides ... should greatly encourage all Americans.

"I applaud the President for doing what is right not what is politically and temporarily expedient."

In Vietnam, a random sampling of GIs who heard the speech turned up only one, a sergeant in Saigon, who said he would "go along with President Nixon."

Some soldiers said the United States should pull out immediately, while others expressed doubt over the ability of the South Vietnamese to fight on alone.

CALLEY REACTION

societies often have done.

"In an odd way, it has made clear that we cannot wash our hands of what was done in our name," says the Rev. Dr. Tom Driver, a Methodist theologian of New York's Union Theological Seminary. "We're all in this together."

Recognizing this represents an advance in a society's honesty about itself, he said. "Some kind of grace is present in this adversity."

He said that up to now, the general American assumption has been that the country always stood on tne side of right, but "suddenly we're having to confront what we've never faced before, that in this situation we are not a moral nation."

"This is an important sign of growth, a maturing process," he said. "But as in all stages of growth, it's pretty confused. Our war policy has been immoral from the word go, and now this is being driven home to us."

The Rev. Avery Dulles, a Catholic theologian of the Jesuit Woodstock College, said the case, in pointing up the corporate aspect of human failings, brings out the "traditional idea of original sin."

The Rev. Dr. Roger Shinn, United Church professor of Christian ethics at Union Seminary, said that ordinarily, societies involved in wrongdoing have been inclined to single out a scapegoat to punish as "vindication for the rest of us," portraying him as an "aberration from the system."

"But we've suddenly realized that Calley is not altogether an aberration from the system, but partly a product of it."

He said American aerial bombardments in Southeast Asia regularly and indiscriminately kill civilians, as in the face-to-face My Lai case, yet "people see that nobody is punished for that."

He added: "We all know that something awful was done at My Lai, and we can't say Calley was innocent, but we also know it's wrong to pick one man to penalize for the whole nature of the war, for what a big part of the Army has been doing.

"It's a whole package that goes all the way up to the White House. That's why people are so disturbed about Calley. We know what's going on. We all share in it."

Alabama's Antiriot Law Ruled Void

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—Alabama's antiriot law was declared unconstitutional today by a three-judge federal court.

The ruling was on an appeal by civil rights activist Stokely Carmichael and William Stuart House, who were arrested in Selma, Ala., during a racial disturbance in November, 1966.

The court rejected the antiriot law as too vague to be constitutional and directed that prosecution of the two under the statute be stopped.

Carmichael and House were convicted in Selma Recorder's Court later that month of violating the law. They appealed to Dallas Circuit Court and later went into federal court on a motion to have the statute ruled unconstitutional.

The three judges said the criminal proceedings against the two civil rights leaders was harassment in an effort to prevent their participation in a local political campaign.

The decree was handed down by U.S. Circuit Court Judge John C. Godbold of Montgomery and U.S. District Court Judges Daniel H. Thomas and Virgil Pittman, both of Mobile. The case was tried in Selma in 1967.

At the time of their arrests, Carmichael and House were campaigning on the streets of Selma for the election of a slate of black candidates in a local election in neighboring Lowndes County.

The panel's ruling said: "This statute fails to meet constitutional standards because of its vagueness and overbreadth. As written, the statute is an easy vehicle for the suppression of unpopular causes and actions."

Radicals in Berkeley Are Jubilant

By PAUL KERN LEE

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Radical winners of three City Council seats pressed jubilantly today for control of the city government and a shakeup of the municipal system.

They called their ballot box success a pattern to be copied by other restless university communities across the nation.

A coalition of leftists-blacks, other minorities, "street people" and University of California students—pulled off the victory in Tuesday's election.

"Berkeley is at least five years ahead of the rest of the country," said Ilona Hancock, 30, one of the coalition winners. She is the white wife of a university faculty member.

Another winner, Ira Simmons, 28, Negro attorney, said, "This could serve as a blueprint for other cities with the same basic makeup as Berkeley."

The coalition's third victory, D'Army Bailey, 29, also a Negro lawyer, said, "The kinds of changes we are talking about are revolutionary." He declared his first step would be to demand ouster of the police chief for being "out of step with the times."

An initiative to split the police into three separate departments under neighborhood control lost by a 2-1 margin. But Mayor-elect Warren Widener, a Negro, said this was meaningless because "we're going to restructure the police department anyhow."

White conservative John DeBontis, who gave up a council seat to run for mayor and finished a poor third issued a gloomy farewell. DeBonis declared:

"I see destruction. If you think people will want to put money into Berkeley, forget it, buddy.

"In a few more years, you'll have boarded-up stores all through town ..."

The council members-elect called quickly for a complete rewrite of the city charter, abolition of the city manager form of government, tax changes, a police purge and broader neighborhood participation in a decentralized system.

The council has eight members plus a voting mayor.

The radical slate won three of four vacancies, but the fourth winner and top vote-getter was Edward E. Kallgren, a white who describes himself as an independent liberal.

With three moderate holdovers, Kallgren's attitude could be decisive.

When Widener moves from his council seat to the Mayor's chair May 1, the council must appoint a successor for the two years remaining on his term.

gional capitals like New York, Atlanta, Chicago, and San Francisco.

Land values go up, not down in New York and Chicago. And just as New York lured companies and capital from weaker cities during the two decades after World War II when half the commercial office space in the nation was built in Manhattan, so Atlanta is thriving off the South.

Driving into Atlanta from the nation's fourth busiest airport one passes a sign proudly proclaiming that more than half of the 500 biggest corporations have offices in Atlanta.

"But the Midwestern manufacturing cities like Detroit and Cleveland don't have strong cores, strong office headquarters functions, don't have commercial functions," Thompson says.

So what of the Detroits and the Clevelands?

Thompson prescribes patience. He believes cities have nearly all lost those people who pay more in taxes than they get from the city in return.

"It used to be legitimate for mayors to cry that they were losing revenues because they were losing citizens" Thompson says, "but now they don't have any net loss because of people moving out, and the next wave may help their financial picture. That may include poor people who cost the city more than they put into it."

Whether the cities will in fact lose some of those people who cost more than they pay depends, Thompson notes, on what policy the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development will adopt on open housing in the suburbs.

HUD Secretary George Romney says, "I would like to forever lay to rest the idea that our department is undertaking to bring about an integration of the suburbs—the implication being all the suburbs—and the use of our programs to that end. I'm opposed to that."

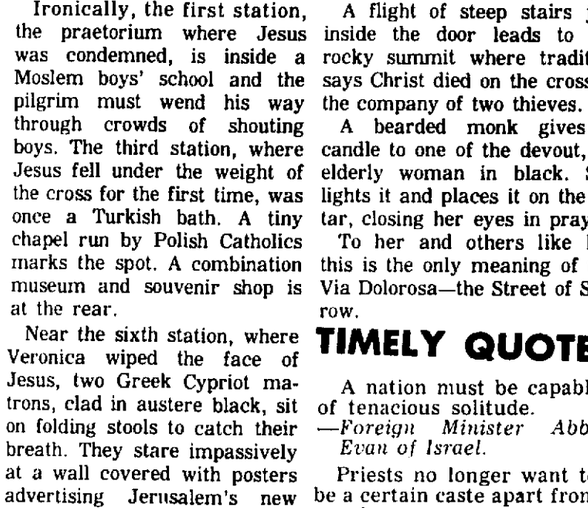

"You can argue that it is important for the suburbs to help the central city because they have to work here," Frank says. "But the fact is things can get worse and worse in Boston and they don't really give a damn. They may have to buy guns to take with them to work but they don't care."

At the same time, Thompson would favor using HUD's program for new towns to deflect rural migrants away from the old big cities.

"In the 70s, I would say take cities of 250,000 to 500,000 and direct rural migrants there by putting new towns just outside them. These cities are proven winners with nice growth rates, rising per capita income, high employment."

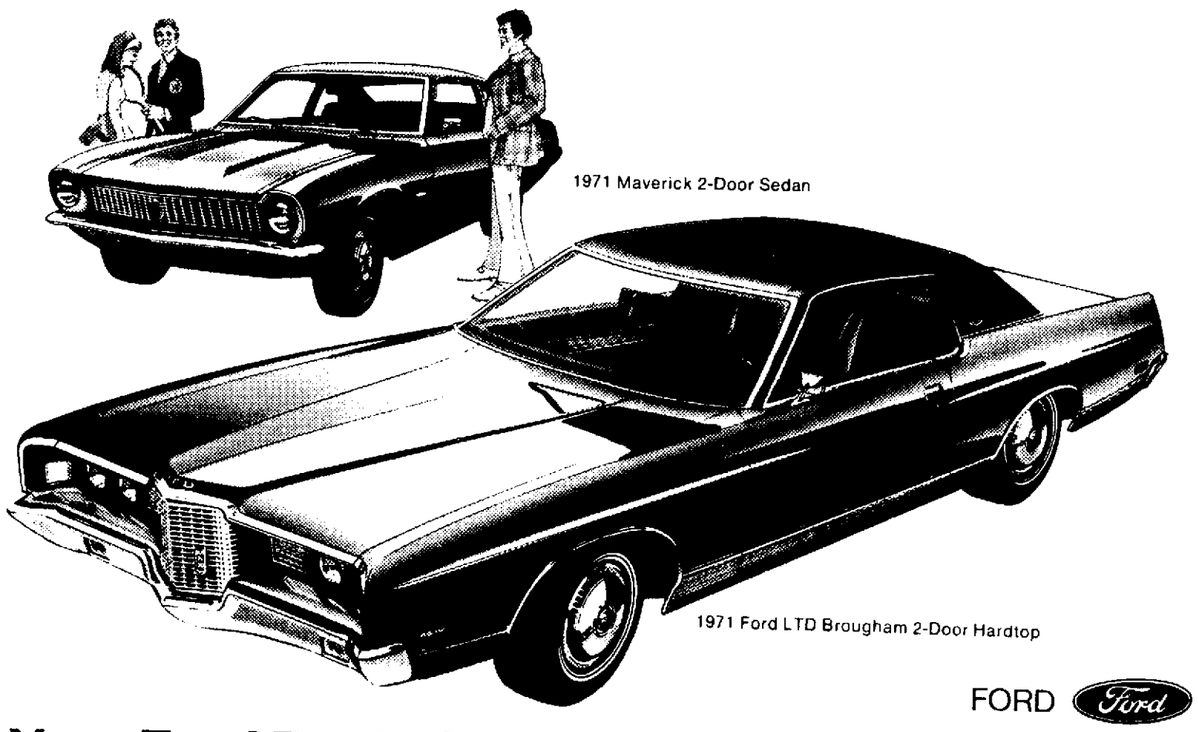

He's talking about places like Louisville, Wichita and Charlotte, N.C.

YOUTH ASKED FOR IT!

This column is for young people, their problems and pleasures, their troubles and fun. As with the rest of Helen Help Us!, it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush-off.

Send your teenage questions to YOUTH ASKED for it, care of Helen Help Us! this newspaper.

A SWITCH IN TIME—

Dear Helen:

This solution might not work for everyone, but it saved us from divorce.

Within a few months after our marriage, I changed to a lazy, surly, indifferent gal.

My husband was patient for a while, then he had a conference with my Dad—and brought home one of the family paddles. I'd felt it many times when I was growing up.

Harold gave me an ultimatum. Straighten up or—whap! I laughed. Within a week I learned he was a man of his word.

Eventually, with patience and a strong paddle, Harold made a woman out of me, and a happy one. This started 15 years ago. I still have a tendency to avoid responsibilities, so I still average a spanking a week.

Our rule is: It works both ways. I have the right to spank him if he deserves it. We have no children.

Though other couples abhor this (and some agree), we feel paddling has made our marriage happier, warmer, and more interesting.—H.W.

Dear H:

What switches you on turns me off, but then—Different strokes for different folks.—H.

Dear Helen:

I'm not sure if you can reprint parts of what another newspaper writer—Louis Cassels—said over two years ago, but if you can, I think this is worth repeating. It's called "New Years Resolutions for a Middle-aged Sinner":

During the coming year I will not speak rudely or brusquely to any person—such as a waiter or bus driver—who can't answer me in kind without jeopardizing his livelihood.

I will try at least once a day to offer an unexpected compliment to someone who can't do me any good.

I will bear with my wife's annoying habits as graciously as I expect her to bear with my minor imperfections.

I will not condemn a whole class of people (students, teenagers, judges, government workers—TV newsmen) for the outrageous acts of specific individuals.

I will stop telling young people their music is a clangorous noise and admit it might be at least on a par with such cultural treasures of my youth as "Three Little Fishes in an Itty-Bitty-Poo"—"Mairzy Doats," etc.

I will resist the sin of gluttony by rigorously enforcing a five-minute interval between the time I clean my plate and the time I decide whether I really want a second helping.

When Negroes say harsh things about white people or make extreme demands or threats—I will keep reminding myself that if I were black, I'd probably be pretty angry and obstreperous myself.

I will keep a tight grip on my temper when someone in social conversation expresses what I regard as a stupid opinion about Vietnam, religion, pro football and other subjects I take seriously, remembering that it is just barely possible he may be right and I may be wrong.

I will order my halo now, just in case I succeed in keeping even half of these resolutions.—LOUIS CASSESL, UPI Religion Writer.

Fashion Tips

It's a revolutionary age, and baby you ain't seen nothin' yet. There's a new hair coloring foam on the market that comes in an aerosol container. When you use it you can watch the color of your hair change into the shade you desire.

Q-Tips are a must in every cosmetic wardrobe. These cotton swabs easily wipe away make-up mistakes, take off nail polish in no time, remove the results of too heavy a hand with mascara and are useful in applying medication to blemishes.

Moisturizers now come with a hint of tint to give a faint glow under or over foundation. Or they can be used without foundation or powder if your complexion is good.

To soften skin or relieve chapped hands try baby oil. It does the trick for girls of all ages—1 to 60 and up.

It's important to wash your face twice daily if you use make-up — and who doesn't, however natural we may look after its application. But if blemishes or blackheads are a problem an extra cleanup will help.

Child Nutrition Funds Are Still Insufficient

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Food and Nutrition Writer

Don't be too impressed that more than $1 billion in federal funds and foods is going to bolster the nutrition of the nation's children. Even though this sum is 25 per cent more than the $754 million earmarked last year, it is far from what is actually needed.

This year $750,000 will be spent for nutrition education and training. But the amount is so small only a beginning can be made.

Christine Justin, head of the U.S. Agriculture Department's food utilization and training aids section of the Food and Nutrition Services, says:

"We prepare training material for use by all persons involved in the school lunch program. That means buying guides, fact sheets and special instructions." She adds, "We evaluate foods for use in the program, test formulas for mixes and check for nutritional standards. Though we don't have any policy yet about substitute foods, we do favor the use of a soybean product which can be eaten cold in schools without cooking facilities. For example, a cake is rich in protein and vitamin C and the little children seem to like it."

Miss Justin, whose experience includes work with state experimental stations, as a federal food grader, as a community nutritionist and a Navy food service expert, believes the attempt to upgrade the food program will help a lot.

The young Aids Section has arranged for five seminars at land grant colleges. About 500 local supervisors selected by the states will attend.

"The changing eating habits of children are a cause of worry," she explains. "Actually, today's habits are worse than five years ago. Snacking all the time may be one explanation. Another may be that fewer families sit down together for a meal. It is part of our job to get more nutrition information to the parents."

Any child from a family with an income at or below the national income poverty guidelines is entitled to a lunch, either free or at a reduced price (not to exceed 20 cents) in a school that is receiving federal school lunch cash or commodity assistance.

But many needy children avoid asking for a free lunch through pride or embarrassment. That is why so many legislators and educators hope to see the school lunch free and a free breakfast for everyone. An ill-fed child is dulled, lower in stamina and less productive.

Baltimore's Chances Are Very Slim

NEW YORK — Baltimore's chances of squaring the NBA's Eastern Conference playoff finals appeared meager when Kevin Loughery qualified for a pair of crutches Thursday and Gus Johnson's injured knee showed little inclination to heal quickly.

The Bullets dropped Tuesday's opener here by one point, 112-111, as Johnson sat out the game in civvies. Loughery was forced to wear an ice pack on his bruised right heel after the game to ease the pain.

New York's chances of taking a 2-0 lead Friday afternoon blossomed considerably after the latest medical communique was announced from Baltimore.

"Loughery had an injection before the first game to relieve the pain," a Bullet spokesman said. "But the pain became more severe and Kevin had to stay completely off his right foot today. We won't know whether he'll play until just before the game. The same is true for Johnson."

Coach Gene Shue, still smarting over the $500 fine meted out by National Basketball Association Commissioner Walter Kennedy Thursday for publicly denouncing officiating in the opener, said Johnson is more of a doubtful starter than Loughery. Gus had a soft cast removed from his left leg Thursday and flexed the knee with considerable pain.

If both Loughery and Johnson are sidelined, Shue will go with Fred Carter at guard and John Tresvant at forward. Carter nearly ruined the Knicks Tuesday when he hit a torrid third quarter streak and netted his first five floor shots.

"I'd rather have Loughery and Johnson fit and playing," said Knick forward Dave DeBusschere, who still feels the sting of a forehead bruise he received when playfully whacked on the pate with a water pitcher by his 25-monthold daughter, Michelle.

"Don't get me wrong," he protested, Baltimore isn't just keeling over because of those injuries. The Bullets have a lot of guts. They showed it Tuesday night. Still, I would like to play them at full strength so there's no question of our superiority."

DeBusschere said the way Baltimore played in the third period it was difficult to tell that one of the Bullet stars was missing.

"Carter burned me pretty good," said Dave. "He hit a couple of jumpers and then went around me a couple of times. I didn't know he could shoot from out there."

Carter's performance sparked a 16 for 20 floor show that helped Baltimore take the spotlight.

Walt Frazier, who averaged 25 points a game in New York's 4-1 series victory over Atlanta that kicked off the Knicks defense of their NBA title, paced the champions with a 24-point burst in the first game win against Baltimore.

The Knicks again will be five-point favorites to win their second home game with the Bullets. They were rated 2-1 picks for this playoff series prior to the opener.

Hannum Quits Rockets of San Diego

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — Alex Hannum quit as coach of the National Basketball Association San Diego Rockets Thursday to become head coach, president and general manager of the Denver Rockets of the American Basketball Association.

The surprise announcement came after Hannum returned from what was believed to be a vacation.

He blamed low pay and San Diego owner Bob Breitbard's failure to land Detroit center-forward Otto Moore in a trade as the reasons for his resignation.

After Hannum came to San Diego in December of 1969 he purchased a home and said it would take wild horses to drag him away. The San Diego Rockets finished third in the NBA's Coastal Division this year, barely missing the playoffs.

One problem facing San Diego is that both clubs selected Cliff Meely of Colorado as their first draft choice. Now Hannum will be competing against his old club for the 6-foot-8 forward. Hannum said the Denver owner had given him the green light to go all the way to sign Meely.

During a pro coaching career, dating back to 1956-57, Hannum brought in six division champions and three league titlists. St. Louis won National Basketball Association division crowns in 1957 and 1958, San Francisco was successful in 1964, Philadelphia in 1967 and 1968 and Oakland in 1969.

Lakers Take on Bucks in Semifinals

MILWAUKEE — The Los Angeles Lakers managed to beat the Milwaukee Bucks only once in five regular season National Basketball Association games—and they did it without Jerry West.

After absorbing four solid whippings at the hands of the Bucks, the Lakers went into the teams' final meeting determined to prove they could beat Milwaukee even without their star guard.

The result was a 116-93 victory that turned out to be one of the few times during the entire season Milwaukee got a taste of its own brand of torture.

Friday night the two teams will clash again in the first game of a playoff series to determine the NBA Western Conference champion. And West is out of the lineup again, with a leg injury.

The Bucks earned their berth by clipping the San Francisco Warriors four games to one in the first round playoffs and Los Angeles took the Chicago Bulls in seven games. Milwaukee has been resting up for the second round since last Sunday while the Lakers didn't finish off Chicago until Tuesday night.

During the season Coach Larry Costello's Bucks disposed of the Lakers by scores of 117-100, 113-88, 122-88 and 112-97 before Los Angeles turned the tables in the final meeting, beating Milwaukee at its own defensive game.

However, that loss was the one that set Milwaukee off on its record breaking 20-game winning streak.

During the regular season Milwaukee shot at a 47.1 per cent clip for an average of 111.4 points per game against the Lakers while Los Angeles shot only 39.7 per cent and averaged 97.8 points against the Bucks.

In the rebounding department Milwaukee held a 277-254 edge although Wilt Chamberlain, the NBA leader, bested Milwaukee's Lew Alcindor by a 75-66 margin. The 7-foot-2 Bucks center, however, outshot Chamberlain 27.6 points per game to 23.2 in the five games.

Milwaukee's forwards, Bob Dandridge and Greg Smith, collected 70 boards between them against Los Angles while the Lakers forecourt duo, Hap Hairston and Keith Erickson, grabbed a total of 82.

With Erickson moved to guard to replace West and Jim McMillian inserted into the vacant forward slot, Milwaukee will enjoy the advantage of a stronger bench with the likes of Bob Bosser, McCoy McLemore and Lucius Allen at Costello's side.

Rentzel's Sentence Probated

DALLAS — Dallas Cowboy flanker Lance Rentzel Thursday received a five-year probated sentence on a charge of indecent exposure but said he did not intend to let the incident end his athletic career.

Rentzel pleaded guilty to the felony charge involving the November 1970 incident and received the probated sentence from District Judge John Mead. Mead could have sentenced Rentzel to 15 years in prison.

"This has been a very trying situation," Rentzel told newsmen after his court session. "I plan to work with my doctor until this problem is solved. I'm sorry I had to have my wife (singer Joey Heatherton) and family suffer because of this."

The 27-year-old receiver agreed to psychiastric and medical treatment. Rentzel's future in professional football seemed uncertain until his statement regarding his athletic career.

Rentzel voluntarily removed himself from the active Cowboy roster when he was indicted on the indecent exposure charge and generally had declined to speculate on his future.

He said Thursday, however, that his teammates had influenced his decision.

"I told them (his teammates) that I'd be back and I will," Rentzel said. "I can't end my athletic career this way."

Coach Tom Landry declined comment except to say Rentzel is "a member of our squad."

Opening Day Attendance Mark Set

NEW YORK — Major league baseball attendance for opening day games reached record proportions this week, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office announced Thursday.

Despite the comparatively low attendance at Shea Stadium in New York, where rain held the crowd to 26,062 for the MetExpo game, the 12 inaugural games drew 430,688, surpassing the mark of 401,310 set in 1959.

The figures were topped by the 54,089 in Detroit, the largest crowd ever to see a Tiger opener. The 50,000 mark was also cleared in Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium, where 51,702 watched the Reds bow to Atlanta.

There were two sellouts — 45,061 in Washington for the Senators-Oakland game, and 41,121 in Wrigely Field for the Cubs-Cardinals.

The two leagues drew almost the same number of fans, with the National holding a slight edge.

Pro Sports Drafts: Who Benefits?

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Colleges and professional sports leagues have worked together—"conspired" might be closer—to restrict the freedom of choice of young athletes.

The situation has been publicized and may in time be changed by the Spencer Haywood case. Haywood, the first of what appears a growing group of college undergraduates to sign pro contracts with the American Basketball Association, has highlighted a basic conflict between the laws of the land and the laws of the National Basketball Association and National Football League. (The latter two being aided by the tacit approval of the colleges.)

Spencer Haywood
He started something.

The NBA and the NFL have refused to draft college players whose class has not yet graduated. Whether the athlete himself graduates after four years has never been of much concern to the pro leagues. The ABA, meanwhile, struggling to stay financially alive, is trying to get whatever talent it can to challenge the NBA and effect a merger.

The draft rule has benefited the NBA and NFL. It has benefited the colleges. It is much more questionable how much it benefited those few athletes who could—or who could have—received large bonuses or contracts to turn professional when they were sophomores or juniors in college. Or, for some, right out of high school.

The significant point is that supremely gifted young athletes did not have a choice. Nothing like this cozy arrangement between colleges and pro leagues exists in other areas. For example, if a college sophomore majoring in journalism can latch on to a newspaper job, that fellow has a prerogative. The paper does not say that the candidate cannot be hired until his class graduates—whether or not he receives a degree. What industry that relies more on talent than on academic book learning would be that arrogant? There are in fact two.

The draft rule has benefited the pro leagues: They have in the colleges a minor league which they need not subsidize. Also there is a convenient line of demarcation for drafting which helps keep a balance of league competition.

The colleges benefit in keeping $1 million intercollegiate programs stable. Outstanding athletic teams bring glory to the school, which is a source of pride to alumni who are prospective donors.

Haywood's case has been settled out of court. But a test case concerning the four-year rule may yet arise which will determine the course of the drafts, unless the leagues do it themselves.

"We are constantly reevaluating our draft rules," said NBA commissioner Walter Kennedy. "We anticipate that future drafts may have to be conducted under different rules. What the changes will be I cannot predict."

Pete Rozelle, commissioner of the NFL, was a bit more testy: "I can't believe a practice that is for the protection of the colleges could be legally ruled invalid. If it would be, of course, it would no doubt destroy college football and basketball."

His fears were echoed by University of Mississippi basketball coach Robert Jarvis, whose star, sophomore Johnny Neumann, has signed a reported $2 million contract with Memphis of the ABA. Said Jarvis:

"I feel the pros should have waited until a boy's graduating class finished. They are going to wreck a lot of good college programs if they don't."

They also could wreck some good college coaching salaries, which often thrive in high-pressure intercollegiate athletics.

Spencer Haywood has said, "The college gets a good player or two and all it thinks about is winning teams and packed gyms and money flowing in from all sides. Nobody thinks of the player himself." Except the pros, who are watching him mature, expense-free.

One highly placed pro basketball official said, "The original concept was that the player who decided to enter college presumably wanted to remain there. And the draft was instituted to prevent his being lured off campus by a pro offer." (Of course, the player had been lured onto the campus by recruiter-salesmen.)

The official line of the pros comes under suspicion by studies made which show that, for example, only about one-half of all pro basketball and football players receive degrees with their classes.

This is not a plea to keep exceptional athletes out of college. In fact, the abolishment of the "four-year" rule could affect only a few, the Alcindors, the Maraviches, the Gilmores, the Neumanns.

Of course, these millionaires can spend their money any way they want. Night school, say, for an Alcindor, an Eldorado for a Ralph Simpson. College is for those who want it, and can hack it. The same for pro ball.

It should not matter if that star is a "hardship" case or not, whether he is being offered $1 million or not. He should be given a freedom of choice, which is what our country is supposed to be all about.

ONE-SIDED TUG OF WAR

Walker Shuts Out the Phillies

PITTSBURGH — Luke Walker pitched a five-hitter and Willie Stargell doubled home two runs to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 2-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Thursday night.

Walker, the Pirates' big winner last season with a 15-6 record, allowed only one runner as far as third base and needed only 97 pitches to set down the Phillies in his first 1971 start and extend his two-season winning streak to six games.

The Pirates scored their runs off losing pitcher Woody Fryman in the sixth inning. With one out, Roberto Clemente singled to left and was forced at second by Manny Sanguillen.

Bob Robertson drew a walk on a 3-2 pitch and then Stargell lined a double over rightfielder Roger Freed's head to score Sanguillen and Robertson.

The Phillies mounted their only serious threat with two out in the seventh inning.

Walker who struck out four, retired 10 men in a row between the second and the fifth innings. Aside from the threat in the seventh, just one other runner got as far as second base.

Rookie Hits Single, Wins for Indians

CLEVELAND — Rookie Gomer Hodge singled home two runs with two outs in the ninth inning Thursday afternoon as Cleveland Indians rallied for a 3-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Hodge, who came into the game as a pinch-hitter in the eighth inning with the Indians trailing 2-0, doubled and scored the first Cleveland run on a single by John Lowenstein.

Vada Pinson opened the Indians ninth against Boston reliever Ken Tatum by lining a single to left. Ray Fosse was hit by a pitched ball and both runners advanced on a sacrifice by Ken Harrelson. Pinchhitter Lou Camilli grounded to first baseman George Scott and Pinson was caught in a rundown between third and home. Fosse went to third and Camilli took second and scored Hodge's game winning single.

Sam McDowell hurled the first seven innings and gave up only two hits while striking out nine. The big lefthander gave up a leadoff home run to Luis Aparicio in the third and another homer to Boston starter Sonny Siebert in the fifth.

Siebert, who was sailing along on a two-hitter over the first seven innings, was sent to the showers without retiring a batter in the eighth.

THURSDAY'S STARS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BATTING—Harold "Gomer" Hodge, Indians, delivered a pinch double and scored Cleveland's first run in the eighth and then stroked a two-run single with two out in the ninth for a 3-2 victory over Boston.

PITCHING—Luke Walker, Pirates, blanked Philadelphia 2-0 on five hits, his sixth career triumph with a loss over the Phillies.

Father of the Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. — (NEA) — The frail figure of Robert Tyre Jones Jr., still sets the tone at the Masters. It was his golf tournament, devised in 1934 as his perpetuating memorial. He was only 32.

Bob Jones (he never has liked being called Bobby) funneled all his devotion to the game which had made him a hero of the Golden Twenties into the one week of spring rites at the course carved out of the rolling clay hills of northern Georgia.

And it is a bit of sadness that he can no longer be at the white frame cottage on the edge of the 10th tee. He is desperately ill from syringomyelia, the progressive disease of the spinal cord which has made him an invalid for more than 20 years.

The last time I spoke to Bob Jones was at that cottage six Masters ago (that's how you tell time in Augusta). I was able to get in through the intercession of my good friend Furman Bisher of Atlanta. Jones was deep in an easy chair, his omnipresent wheelchair nearby, casually wearing a robe of green, the color which has become symbolic of the Masters.

Coody Is Leading the Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga — Charlie Coody, who remembers well how fast three strokes can disappear on the Augusta National golf course, said after shooting his six-under-par 66 to lead the first round of the Masters Thursday that it "just put me in a real good position."

The 33-year-old Coody of Abilene, Tex., is the same young man who found himself in the lead in the helter-skelter final round of the 1969 Masters as he walked to the 16th tee. He isn't likely to forget what happened next—he bogeyed all three holes and finished two strokes behind.

"There's 54 more holes to go," said the tall, laconic Texan when questioned after taking his opening-round three-stroke lead.

"Yes, I'm a little charged up about it," he admitted. "As a matter of fact, I felt so good there at the end, I said to my caddy that I wished it was a 72-hole marathon—you know, that we could play right through."

Coody, tall and dark-haired, has enjoyed indifferent success in his career as a player on pro golf's tour. He's won only two tournaments since joining the tour in 1963, and the last of those victories was in 1969. He admitted that, other than that 1969 Masters, he's never been a really strong contender in any major championship.

"In a couple of PGAs and a couple of Opens, I was in pretty good position going into the final round," he recalled. "But I never got that big good round that you need to win."

Unlike that bogey barrage that sank him in '69, Coody didn't have a single bogey in Thursday's opening round—just 12 pars and six birdies, on the second, eighth, 10th, 13th, 14th, and 15th holes. It was those three in a row in the middle of the back nine that broke open the tight battle for first place.

On the par-five 13th, he hit his third shot from just off the green and it struck the pin and bounced back an inch from the cup. He topped that on the 14th when he holed out a 40-foot chip shot after his second shot had caught the edge of a trap. On the 15th, another par five, he got down in two putts from 30 feet.

As a matter of fact, it was the way he burned up the par five holes that put the Texan ahead—he birdied all four of them.

"On each of those par fives, I was able to use a putter on my third shot," Coody explained. "I consider myself a good driver, that is, I get good distance and I get pretty much the kind of position I want. And I consider myself a good, well, a reasonably good putter. Those were the chief factors in my 66 and in the 67 that I had in the third round of the Masters last year."

Coody has won about $18,000 so far on the pro tournament trail this year, with his highest finish a fourth in the National Airlines Open two weeks ago. He admits it hasn't been a particularly good year for him so far.

"Actually, I think I've been playing better than I've been scoring," he said. "Every year I seem to run into a period when my putting is sub-par, or what I consider sub-par, for a while. That's the way it was early this year. But I really putted well in the National Airlines Open, and that has given me a great deal of confidence in my puting here."

Enough confidence to think of winning the Masters?

"There's still 54 holes to go," he repeated.

Hiatt Is Big Bat as Astros Down Cubs

HOUSTON — Jack Hiatt, obtained from the Chicago Cubs in the winter, slashed two run-scoring doubles and Jack Billingham pitched a four-hitter to pace the Houston Astros to a 7-3 victory over the Cubs Thursday night.

Hiatt, starting his first game for Houston, doubled home Denis Menke in the second inning in his first time up as a Astro. Hiatt has now played with five major league teams and hit safely his first time at bat with all of them.

Hiatt's second double sparked a three-run fourth inning.

Eddie Mathews Returns to the Fold

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.—(NEA)—Eddie Mathews, the new Atlanta Braves' first base coach, gingerly pulled off a blue stirrup baseball stocking and smiled at the story someone was telling him.

It concerned an item about an ex-convict in a recent newspaper. The man had spent 35 years in prison. After three weeks on the outside, he appeared one morning at the prison gates. He asked to be let back in because he could not adjust to the foreign environment. The gates opened wide.

Eddie Mathews
Back to the womb?

"Me, too," said Mathews. "I couldn't adjust to the outside either."

Mathews quit baseball two years ago at age 37, after 20 years as a professional baseball player. He walked right off the graduation stage at Santa Barbara, Calif., High School, signed with the Braves' organization and went straight to North Carolina and the beginning of an outstanding career. Going into this season, Mathews ranked seventh on the all-time major league home run list, with 512.

He probably could have prolonged his playing career, but a back injury lingered. The Detroit Tigers, the team he had been traded to, offered him a coaching job, but he turned it down. Mathews wanted to stay home with his family in Milwaukee and try to preserve a floundering marriage. He also desired a good-paying, interesting job, and thought that selling municipal bonds there would be the answer.

"It doesn't take you long to realize how much you miss baseball," said Mathews. "Especially when you didn't prepare for anything else in life."

Mathews sat on a stool in the locker room here at the Braves' spring training camp. The hair on his head is thinning and the hair on his chest is graying. His face was wet with sweat, because he had been in the batting cage to stroke some pitches. ("It sure doesn't look that hard when you're sitting in the stands," he said.) His now roundish face looked content.

Mathews' white wool team shirt still bears No. 41. The number had been "unretired" by the Braves when Mathews decided to return.

"I liked my job in municipal bonds," said Mathews, "don't get me wrong on that. In fact, I still sell them part-time. But it was such a slow process. You've got to build these clients, and keep going around to see them. I'd be working and working and didn't see any damn sales. And the people I worked for said, 'You're doin' fine, but these things take a year, two years.' I couldn't grasp it.

"It's tough for a baseball player. Things happen for us right away. Either you hit a homer or you strike out. Bing, bang, boom. It's done.

"And it was hard not being able to answer all the questions that clients would have about bonds. Some even deliberately tried to trip me up. But I was honest. I said that I didn't know when I didn't, and that I had people I was working with who were the best in the field and they knew the answers.

"People talked baseball a lot to me. Everybody's a baseball fan. I can give an answer about baseball as good as anyone. But I couldn't about municipal bonds. That was frustrating."

Mathews, who had saved and invested his baseball earnings wisely, still had a let-down in salary. "I went from $70,000 a year to $15,000," he said. "And that really wasn't bad for a man just starting out new in something. But I was uncomfortable in looking around and seeing others my age and younger who were established and knowledgeable in the field.

"And I missed baseball. I really did. I missed taking a guy out on a double play. I missed hitting a pop fly and when a guy dropped it to be standing on second base and laughing. I missed the joking, the locker-room spoofs.

"When I was in baseball—ever since I was 17—that's all we ever talked about was baseball. The guys I knew, anyway. We reminisced about baseball, or argued baseball strategy way into the night. I enjoyed every aspect of baseball."

Mathews' marriage broke up. (He has since remarried.) He grew tired of waiting for that next year's client to roll around. Mostly, he missed the only business he ever knew or loved. He returned for $15,000 a year to coach first base.

"I guess baseball spoils us, too," he said. "Little things like them taking care of your baggage on the road. Nothing to worry about. The club takes it away for you, and it's there when you arrive at the hotel.

"Yeah, I guess you can say I've returned to the womb."

Bateman Big Gun in Win Over Mets

NEW YORK — John Bateman drove in three runs to support a route-going performance by batterymate Steve Renko Thursday and spark the Montreal Expos to a 6-2 victory over the New York Mets.

Bateman drove in a run with an infield out during a three-run first inning and delivered a two-out, two-run single in a three-run seventh that broke the game open.

Renko was touched for ten hits, including Cleon Jones' first homer of the season, but struck out six and was tough in the cluthc. He pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the fourth, after Jones' homer had pulled the Mets to within one run, by striking out Jerry Grote and Gary Gentry to end the inning.

The Expos jumped on Gentry for three runs in the first inning as the Mets' righthander experienced control trouble. Boots Day led off with a single, Ron Hunt walked and Rusty Staub scored Day with a single.

SHAVING STROKES

by Frank Beard

Take One More Club

I would guess that 75 per cent of all shots to the green are way short of the pin. Arnold Palmer, of course, is the exception. He isn't afraid to hit the ball up to the hole, and that's why he's able to make those famous charges—even today.

If I were you, I would make a habit of hitting one more iron than you think you need. If you figure a shot at the pin to be a 6-iron, take a 5-iron instead. I think you'll find you're almost never too long, and you will stop being so short.

Analyze your play for a couple of weeks and see if this isn't the case. Count the number of times you come up short or long, then take an extra club and see if the percentages don't improve strikingly. You may say that you'll go over the green. I really doubt it. I've seen too many shots come up well shy.

Even if you do go over, you're generally better off than if you'd taken less club and been short. On modern courses most of the trouble—the sand and water—is in front of a green. At the back is the exit to the next tee.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Here is an unusual problem. South succeeded in going down two at his one no-trump contract. He rose with dummy's king of clubs at trick one—a correct start. He led the 10 of diamonds, covered East's king with the ace, went to dummy with the heart ace, led a second diamond, won the queen and led a third diamond to West's nine. West led the queen of hearts which was won by dummy's king. A club lost to West's ace, whereupon a heart lead gave East two heart tricks and a spade lead back ended all hope for the declarer.

At different stages in the play, South could have made one, two or three no-trump. See if you can find these lost opportunities.

The first was when East played the king of diamonds. South could have ducked. If East led back a spade they would have collected four spades and the ace of clubs and South would have made his contract on the nose.

The play for three no-trump would have been for South to play three rounds of diamonds immediately. This would put West on lead with the nine and his best play would be to lead ace and another club, but this would allow South two clubs, two hearts and five diamonds for a total of nine.

The chance for eight tricks occurred when West led the queen of hearts. South should let this hold. If West played his last heart South would make nine. If West shifted to ace and another club, South would only make one heart trick, two clubs and five diamonds for eight tricks.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Get at Cause of Rectum Bleeding

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Recently my doctor gave me a thorough test of the womb and rectum to determine if there was anything malignant. The report came back that there was nothing malignant. About a week or 10 days after I noticed sometimes there were small blood spots on the toilet paper. What could this mean? I am 78 and have no faith in X ray. I have no pain.

Dear Reader—Probably it means you have some minor hemorrhoids (piles) but anyone who develops bleeding from the rectum should consult his doctor without delay, even though examination was recent. If it is hemorrhoids, the peace of mind will be worth the effort and if it is something more serious, then early treatment can mean cure.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Recently I read an article in the paper that stated if one drank wine and ate cheese while taking an MAO-inhibitor it could give you soaring blood pressure and possible brain damage. Is this true? What is an MAO-inhibitor and what do the letters stand for?

Dear Reader—Yes, it is true. The MAO-inhibitors are monoamineoxidase inhibitors, used sometimes to treat depression and elevate the mood. You cannot get them without a doctor's prescription and I would assume he would advise his patients not to drink wine or eat cheese if he gave them this type of medicine. There are other medicines used to treat depression that do not have this effect.

Dear Dr. Lamb — A few months ago I coughed and felt something pushed out of my navel. It is about the size of my little finger. I can't feel it too much, only when I cough or push out.

Please tell me if it could be cancer or what. I told my doctor. He didn't look at it or say anything. He said he didn't have time to look.

Dear Reader—I doubt it is cancer. It sounds more like a small hernia through the navel, if anything. It will need to be examined before anyone can tell you if it is a small hernia or not. If it is a hernia, it will probably not cause any serious trouble unless it gets a little bigger.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I would like to know if there is any harm in taking gelatin over a long period of time, say one package a day for 90 days. I am taking this for splitting nails and does this really help splitting nails?

Dear Reader—No, it is not harmful. Gelatin is a good source for protein without adding fat to the diet. Some people, probably those who need more protein in their diet, have been pleased with the effects it has on splitting nails. Whether this will apply to you or not can be told in time.

Will Analyze Air to Study World Climate

By BILL NEIKIRK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government plans to analyze air at isolated points around the globe to determine if man is fouling the atmosphere enough to cause a catastrophic change in world climate.

Plans are in the works to establish five more international clean-air monitoring stations in addition to one already operating on an inactive volcano at Mauna Lao, Hawaii.

Officials said the need for increased monitoring of clean air became more urgent when the Hawaiian station detected a sharp jump in the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere in the last few years.

Scientists have expressed fears a large increase in carbon dioxide could produce a "greenhouse effect" and lead to a warming of the earth which could result in melting of the polar ice caps.

At Mauna Loa, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said, the annual growth rate of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere was three times greater from 1968 through 1970 then it was during the middle 1960s.

"It is vital to know whether the Mauna Lao growth rate is typical of the globe as a whole," the agency said.

Next year, it said, plans call for establishing a clean-air monitoring station at Point Barrow, Alaska, and one at the South Pole.

Other sites being considered for future stations include New Zealand, an island south of the equator and a mountain peak in South America.

"They have to be in exceedingly isolated areas, where the air is clean," said Dr. Lester Machta, director of the agency's air resources laboratory. He said some of the stations may be operated in collaboration with foreign governments.

Establishing one such station and staffing it would cost an estimated $100,000 a year. The station will play no part in weather forecasting, a function now handled by NCAA.

PERSONAL FINANCE

By CARLTON SMITH

One of the niftiest devices of recent years for separating the reluctant consumer from his spending money is something called "negative-option" selling.

This ingenious method of overcoming sales resistance simply announces that you have bought something, and are required to pay for it, unless you fight back.

Your chances of being negative-optioned are very good since about 10 million consumers are currently on the list for this treatment.

I can tell you from personal experience how negative-option selling works. To begin with, you see an ad for books, phonograph records, fruit, flowers, wine, whatever. Books, in my case. It's a club plan, and to get you signed up they offer two or three desirable books at virtually giveaway prices. There's no need, it says, to buy X number of books per year, thereafter.

But once you're a "member" (victim?), you are sent and billed for something every month, unless you vigorously resist. A notice comes: "You will shortly be sent this month's club selection, 'Memoirs of a Teen-Age Sex Fiend,' unless the enclosed refusal is returned to us within 10 days."

Ten days? It is not unknown, of course, for the post office to study a piece of mail that long before delivering it. That aside, if you are on vacation or you're just a type who lets mail accumulate for a few days—you have bought a book, record or whatever, whether you wanted it or not.

And you will pay for it, because these people are fierce collectors.

It is an unwarranted nuisance — an expensive nuisance, because inevitably you fail to get some of the refusals back in time — and it's a shoddy way of doing business.

Last year the Federal Trade Commission announced its intention to brand the negative-option device an "unfair and deceptive trade practice," which would make its use illegal. At the required public hearings, the negative-option crowd wheeled up a lot of big guns as witnesses to defend the practice.

In support of outlawing it, only one witness showed up —from a consumer-action group in Boston. The FTC said it obviously lacked a "broad public mandate" for taking any action.

So when you get on a negative-option merchandiser's list—or if you're already on one—don't look around for somebody's shoulder to cry on. Where were you when we needed you?

One school of thought holds that the American consumer will take anything lying down. According to one social psychiatrist, Prof. Ari Kiev of Cornell, we've been conditioned to believe that it's futile to complain, that one individual can't buck the rules and regulations. So you just lie down and take it.

Is that a pretty fair description of you, as a consumer? Or do you still believe it pays to fight back?

If just one victim in 100 of negative-option selling would write an angry letter to the Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C., there would be an avalanche of 100,000 angry letters, and negative-option selling would be dead.

District's Flag

The District of Columbia has a flag consisting of two horizontal red bars on a white field and three red stars in the top white space. It is said to have been adapted from George Washington's family coat of arms.

Let the heavens be glad and let the earth rejoice; and let men say among nations; the Lord reigneth.
